48 NATIONS GET AMERICAN NOTE ON PEACE PACT

GENERAL ADHERENCE TO TREATY EXPECTED

Jugoslavia Appends Signature Just 15 Minutes After Receiving Invitation

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Kellogg treaty renouncing war as a national policy has been placed before 48 other nations by the American diplomatic representatives, for the consideration and approval of their re-tween 64 nations, and thereby practically universal, as was contem plated by Mr. Kellogg throughout the negotiations. Already a number of the governments have indicated in-formally that they are prepared to participate in the treaty.

The United States' invitation said: "The United States has been anxious from the beginning that no state should feel deprived of an opportunity to participate promptly in the new treaty and thus not only align itself formally and solemnly with this new manifestation of the popular demand for world peace but also avail itself of the identical benefits enjoyed by the original

For All Nations "Accordingly, in the draft treaty proposed by it, the United States made specific provision for partici-pation in the treaty by any and every power desiring to identify itself therewith, and this same provision is found in the definitive instrument signed today in Paris.

"It will also be observed that the powers signing the treaty have recorded in the preamble their hope that every nation of the world will participate in the treaty, and in that connection I am happy to be able to say that my government has already received from several governments informal indications that they are prepared to do so at the earliest possible moment. This convincing evidence of the world-wide interest and sympathy which the new treaty has evoked is most gratifying to all the governments concerned."

W. A. Riddell of Canada also argued that public and private manufacture should be placed, as regards facture should be placed, as regards publicity, on the same basis, while M. Jouhaux of France maintained that there would be more danger in failure to publish private than public statistics. He begged the commission to take a far-reaching view of their duties, maintaining that armaments ought now to be dealt with in a very serious manner in view of the fact that the anti-war pact had been signed in Paris.

The British representative, while willing that state and private enterprise should be placed on the same footing, considered it sufficient if the value of the total armaments manufactured were published without giving the weight and number.

Finally N. Sato, Japan, appealed to the commission to accept the compromise as a step forward which had hitherto been impossible during the eight years' discussion of the question. A draft convention embodying the reservations of the various dele gations will, therefore, be sent to the Council of the League, which will subsequently submit it to the Assembly.

> TALLAHASSEE, Fla.-Another at financing muddle was made in the United States District Court at Pen-sacola when the State started a final appeal before Judge Henry Clayton to dissolve the temporary injunction now preventing the sale of $10,000, 000 in new bonds.

Since 1905 when the State firs took patent to the lands of the Everglades and assumed the moral obligation to reclaim them, there has been almost constant litigation surrounding the project.

The present lawsuit in the Federal Court and three others in state courts have been entered by Dade County interests by Spitzer, Rorick & Co. of Toledo with the hope of delaying the sale of the bonds authorized by the 1927 Legislature until the incoming state administration takes the reins next January. Judge Clayton granted a temporary injunc-tion early in July against the sale of the new bonds to Dillon Read & Co. and Eldredge & Co. of New York, and the coming hearing will be on the merits of the case.

In brief, the Dade County interests are hoping to tie up all Everglades reclamation until the legislature finally grants their demands that the Everglades as a drainage district shall be split up and control of 800, 000 acres of rich state lands in that district given them. They demand local control of the Everglades and the same interests that started the mays back in 1905 are still at 12 with

Stabilization Rather Than Cheap Product Admitted to Be Main Desire

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR NEW YORK-With American rubber manufacturers quietly holding 6.1 to their pooled stocks of crude rubber, the Dutch planters endeavoring to organize a valorization scheme to prevent oversupply, and the British ready to throw the world market open on Nov. 1 next without let or hindrance, the outlook for artificial stabilization is today considered dimmer than it has been feet. Dr. John Barrett Believes part of the three great powers involved to reduce the world market for crude rubber to something like stability goes without saying; the only difference existing between them is how is it to be done and who

In 1922 when crude rubber had dropped to 15 cents a pound, and minion of Canada should be ursed plantation growers were threatened with bankruptcy, England adopted the so-called Stevenson plan to restrict the rubber exported from British colonies. At that time British colonies were producing more than 70 per cent of the world's rubber. reduced to 60 per cent, and the price advanced from 15 to 30 cents in the world markets. Later it went to $1 a pound and in one instance. in 1925, to $1.25 on a speculative movement.

Dutch Saw Chance for Profit The Dutch colonies, however, did not see any good reason to join in the restriction plan of the British. Instead, they expanded and took advantage of the increased market resulting in part from the invention of the balloon tire. As a result of restriction British colonies today are producing only about 50 per cent of the world's rubber, having lost the market to these unrestricted planta-

> The experience in this instance is adequate proof that the American manufacturers are not primarily con-cerned with cheap crude rubber, but they are vitally concerned with a stabilized rubber industry. They are not believed desirous of starving out the plantation owners in British, Dutch or any other colonies, but they are concerned with a free and open market for a commodity upon which they are so dependent.

It was for this reason that many American rubber manufacturers have been persuaded to embark upon plantation schemes in Africa, South America, the Philippines and other sections of the world where rubber can be cultivated successfully Valorization Plan Expected The prediction has been made in rade circles that some plan to valorize rubber would be attempted before British restriction scheme is finally abandoned next November. As a matter of fact Dutch bankers are said to be more preturbed over the outlook than anyone else. They have been reaping the rich harvest from their investments in Dutch colonial plantations, and they are apprehensive of the effect of full explicit or implicit reservations, pub-

THERE'S a deal of talk these days about the engineering back of this or that car. Most of it covers a multitude of sins or the lack of something definite to talk about in the cars them-Even in the face of this situation, we want to tell you what Reo engineering means to the buyer of a Reo Flying Cloud. Because Reo engineering can be measured by Reo owners in terms of dollars and cents, of performance and comfort.

Here, precisely, are some of the facts about Reo engineering.

1. Reo engineers have the same experimental facilities that are available in any laboratory. This means that Reo engineers test carefully and select materials and parts that they know have the strength and the durability necessary to uphold the Reo reputation for long life.

themselves with the road tests possible in a limited testing area. Before the first Flying Cloud ever started down the production lines, Flying Cloud engines, Flying Cloud brakes, Flying Cloud clutches, transmissions, steering gears, axles—every integral part—had been subjected to hundreds of thousands of miles of terrific punish-ment on the highways of the Middle West, through the sands of the deserts, over the rocky trails of the Sierras, through the muds of Louisiana bottom

3. Reo engineers are admitted leaders in their field. There may be—probably are—others of equal skill and foresight. But Reo engineers are unique in their freedom to develop their ideas and put into effect their plans. For Reo engineers are unrestricted by a financial policy, built of necessity around a huge indebtedness; Reo engineers are unhampered by the production problems imposed inevitably by a large, immobile plant; and Reo engineers are supported by a capable production personnel whose loyalty to Reo is reflected by the lowest rate of labor turn-over in the industry.

4. Because of these conditions, Reo engineers are free to take advantage of new developments quickly, free to pass these along to Reo buyers more promptly, free to direct the produc-tion of automobiles which embody engineering ideals rather than production requirements.

These facts about Reo engineering will take on additional significance the moment you compare Reo Flying Cloud performance, comfort, ease and construction with any other car. There's one near you-try it for your-

the Rockies end in the Big Bend and the Appalachian begin there. For exploring geologists say that Mountain axis crosses at right angles with the Caballos Ridge, a much more ancient system of mountains than the Rockies, this ridge being a part of the system extending into the Ouchita Mountains in Oklahoma and the Alleghenies in the East. These mountains, once higher than the Rockies, have been cut down by terrific erosion and the wearing-down process is still going on.

First came the sea during the Trenton age, continuing until the end of the Carboniferous age, after which a cataclysm occurred that gave us the Appalachian Range, the sea in the meantime surrendering to land. The volcanoes then began to work overtime, the sea had practically disappeared and presto! there were the Rocky Mountains, a brand new range. Only it required a few million years for each operation. Which was fast work, considering that the earth is several billion years old.

Very little is visible in the receivers shown at this year's show, the tubes being about the only thing, and in some the conden-sers are also visible. Canned radio sets are today the only type on the market. They vary from six to eight-tube jobs, while some manufacturers include the rectifier tubes paratus that has now been developed enables one set of apparatus and aerials to conduct simultaneous telephone and telegraph services.

One afternoon during the progress of the present tests at Bridgwater, a party of beam experts lis-tened to dance music which was being received from Montreal at the same time as and with the same apparatus and aerials as two Morse telegraph services from Montreal. The music was received at full strength and was of excellent quality, and some members of the party danced to the strains from across the Atlantic. There was no hint of Morse interference, and it was impossible to detect that the lilt of the dance band was being transmitted from Canada on the same radio circuit as a high speed "dot and dash" srevice.

This demonstration was given to cluding the Music Building, where Mr. David Sarnoff, vice-president the large phonograph manufacturers and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, by Senatore Marconi and Mr. G. A. Mathieu, the research engineer who has been working in collaboration with Senatore Marconi in the development of the Marconi-Mathieu multiplex sys-

> "Not only does the multiplex system provide in this manner several channels of communication, but its design actually diminishes to a great extent the fading which is the worst enemy of short waves. It is due to the anti-fading properties of the new apparatus that we can get an absolutely constant volume of speech or music in spite of the fact that with the multiplex system you are naturally dividing up the power of your transmitter among the different channels of communication. With less energy to each channel we are still getting even better results on both telegraphy and telephony than was previously possible.

> 'The occasion of the demonstration to our American colleagues was quite an epoch-making event, for it was the first time that the multiplex system had ever been worked across the Atlantic. At present, the multiplex equipment at the Canadian Marconi Company's beam station, near Montreal, and the new receiver at Bridgewater are the only instruments of this type available. The construction of duplicate apparatus however, being hurried forward at the Marconi Company's works at Chelmsford, and it is hoped that within three months' time two-way multiplex working will be achieved

Drastic alterations in the ceremonial which plays so large part in Chinese life have been proposed a special committee appointed by the Nationalist Government to study the question. The committee has recommended that henceforth all ceremonies should have a basis of utmost simplicity, shunning the ornate pageantry which characterizes existing ceremonies, as this is a legacy of the empire and not an attribute of a republic.

verse like Owen Meredith's once popular "Lucille"? It is that and the Connecticut farm, that he is that and Two love stories, one of the north, one of the south, are woven into it as they might be into a historical novel. Comic relief stands shoulder to shoulder with grim tragedy. Episodes make live slave, sinner, saint and everyday citizen.

It is a public as well as a private John Brown starts it, he Grant's genius discovered, Jackson, Sherman, Sheridan, Hooker and Halleck are all assigned their places. The campaigns are fought again from Bull Run to Appomattox. Still it is not simply the retelling of an old tale, for the modern feeling toward war is in it as it is in James Boyd's "Marching On" and in little else we know written of the Civil War. It is as realistic as Brady's photographs.

Crowned by Idealism

Yet idealism, patriotic idealism, crowns it from first to last. Perhaps it is the love of people, of the gentle, gracious South, of the honest and clear-thinking North, of the simple, lovable Negro, the open-heartedness that gives it this high human quality. There is also a love of mere living, of all the aspects of nature, the snowy New England farm, the lazy yield of the plantation, the blue wood smoke of the wilderness. All this Benét works into his poem, with a picture not only of America as it existed in the sixties, but of the past, the thirteen colonies, the pioneer trails, the crafts and the prairie schooners, of Spanish, English, French, Irish and Scottish, and of the future, the far West, the expanding empire, the growing towns, the steel mill and the skyscraper, the German, the Italian, the Pole, the Jew, the Japanese and the Slav. All this he seeks to distill in a crystal cup of air and to have—America.

What other poet has attempted more, or as much? Sandburg, Lindsay, Frost have not stretched such league canvases. Whitman imagned pictures of mammoth size, he and the vision for them, but he set up no such framework; he wrote no single poem of 377 pages. Long-fellow's "Hiawatha" is narrowed down to one phase of American life; Emerson, Lowell, Holmes, Whittier and Poe kept even closer to ballad and lyric lengths.

To dare is not enough. Benét was also prepared. His share in America, he explains to his muse; nis flesh was seeded from no foreign grain

But Pennsylvania and Kentucky wheat,
And it has soaked in California rain
And five years tempered in New England sleet.

Foreign Grain

As a matter of fact, his greatgreat-grandfather, Esteban Benét, was decidedly foreign grain, a sea captain who came to Florida from the Island of Minorca in 1785, but then American birth is only a question of centuries, even for the Indian who perhaps came from Asia in some smaller Mayflower. Benét's grandfather and father were both West Point graduates, the older of them remaining faithful to the Union, even when "being a Unionist Florida presented considerable difficulties." Stephen was brought up at army osts and military history has sunk ied at Yale and, rejected from the ment. The studioholder turned with relief from the window to her morning task. The next time she glanced out, a junk cart stood on the opposite side of the street. It was piled high with barrels of newspapers, and empty mirror frames and doormats and rubber boots and hat racks and broken chairs. "A junk cart, today of all days!" The studioholder sighed impatiently, which made her very much hotter than she was be-At this moment, the junk-cart horse turned and apparently looked her through and through. It was a most disconcertingly keen, apprais ing glance. Having drawn his own as a sober-minded clerk will push a conclusions, he shook his head disparagingly and turned away. He wore a large straw hat with the jaunty abandon of a Spanish caballero. There should have been castanets clicking in the alley behind him. Just then, out of the alley came, not a dancing señorita, but the horse's owner, the junk-man. At first glance, he was not much to look at. A little, lean man, neither young nor old, but if ever a horse beamed, that horse beamed then. He talked rapidly to his master in a complex ear-winking language. And it was when his master talked to him, with his thin, dark face against that velvet, welcoming nose, that the studio holder discovered he was well worth looking at, after all. He had come out of the the alley whistling. He whistled still, between remarks to his horse. It was such gay, clear whistling that she hoped no policeman would stop it on the ground that it might make the automobile horners nervous. And as he placed the latest contribution on the cart, she noticed that he handled it as a connoisseur in porcelain might handle an ancient Chinese vase. "Where was he born? O, at Pauntley in Gloustershire

"Flos Mercatorum," moaned the bell of All Hallowes,

"Told him a tale as he lay upon the hillside, Looking on his home in the meadow-lands below!"

"Told him the truth," boomed the big Bell of Bow!

"Told him a tale," clanged the bell of Cold Abbey;

Sang of a City that was like a blazoned missal-book,

Black with oaken gables, carven and inscrolled;

Every street a coloured page, every sign a hieroglyph

Watch by your shield, lad, in little Pauntley Chancel,

And the Crest a Lion's Head, until the new be won!

Far away remember it! And O, remember this, too,-

Every barefoot boy on earth is but a younger son."

Proudly he answered us, beneath the painted window,-

All the open Earth is mine, and all the Ocean-sea.

The Cardinals had won five straight after the game Tuesday. The return of Bottomley has added much to the offen-sive strength and his hitting serves as an incentive to the others.

CAMP PERRY, O. (P)—A heavy rainfall late Tuesday broke up the opening junior event of the United States Rifle junior event of the United States Rifle Association championship matches here. Forty-four boys and girls were firing in the prone match when the rain drenched the course. The delay hampered tabulation of the scoring, and though the event was finished later, the winner had not been determined by night. Gen. M. A. Reckord, executive vice-president of the rifle association, arrived today from Washington with Brig.-Gen. Frank Parker, assistant chief of staff of the training branch of the War Department.

Sports Frocks in Twenty-Eight Minutes

so ago, Miss Lenore McCormick of New York City cut, sewed and fitted a sports dress in exactly minutes longer than she had taken when she earned the title a few weeks before of champion chainlightning dressmaker of the world, because this time the thread in the machine broke. However, which is more to the point, the costume was complete in every detail, from the eight plaits in the bottom of the skirt to the neatly bound sleeves. When Miss McCormick started, the dress was nothing but three yards of polka-dotted cambric. eight minutes later, when Miss Mary Ackley slipped it on, it was a perfect little sports frock of the sleeveless type, with a straight back, twopieced front, and set off with a white collar, a red tie and a narrow red

Miss McCormick's record as a speedy dressmaker had preceded her, and several hundred incredulous women were on hand to see how any woman could turn out a finished dress in so short a time. The advertisement of a pattern company a while ago to the effect that with their guide the average woman could make a certain dress in an speed with which they could make hour had seemed misleading enough. But here was a woman who, without any evident haste, required less than half that period! No wonder the audience sat on the edge of their chairs, anxious not to miss a single detail as to how she accomplished many women need is the realization the seemingly impossible

Simplicity a Time Saver

A great many women have unconsciously clung to the ideas they had about dressmaking in the days of fitted waists and skirts, high collars, and fitting a simple, attractive dress. plackets and multitudinous button holes, as well as lined skirts with crh line and brush binding at the bottom. No woman could turn out a costume like that in less than a goodly number of days. Numerous fittings, then the seemingly endless wait for the garment one was eager o wear, left a strong impression much time to make a dress.

Sequence Important There are tricks in dressmaking,

tions, and one cannot learn them without practice. Then the work grows easier and is more quickly turned off with each garment made. One of the most valuable secrets is possible, so they may be handled easily in the machine. A two-piece front of a dress, such as Miss Mc-Cormick made, for instance, should be put together after the skirt por-tion has been plaited. When this portion is all finished, except at the neck and hem, it should be sewed to the back at the shoulder seams, but not down the underarm seams just yet. This makes it easier to finish the neck and armholes. When these are done, it is time to close the garment along the two remaining long seams and put in the hem. Of course, all this is assuming that the pattern has been used before and altered, if necessary, so it exactly fits the person for whom the frock was designed.

Undoubtedly many home dress-makers would be surprised at the a dress similar to the one fashioned by Miss McCormick, if they would try to do it in as short a time as possible. Lagging in such work and laying it aside often destroys one's morale for such undertakings. What that the days of difficult dressmak. ing have gone by. And that realization comes speedily when it is found by experiment that the amateur can come remarkably close to Miss Mc

In the meantime, all the difficult features of home dressmaking have silently dropped away. The modern frock demands very little fitting, no high collars, no separate waists and skirts of intricate composition, and practically no plackets and buttonholes, all of which ate up hours of time that may be spent in much more interesting ways today. And along with these changes in style ery and trimmings. The literal translation is "to the daylight" and so used, the term furnishes an artistic way of designating the open-work idea, whether expressed in the form of fabric or its decoration. today, but such wool as is selected usually is subjected to the most rigid inspection. On the other hand, there are occasional instances where the manufacturer is willing to pay a reasonably good price for a lot which fairly suits his particular needs at the

The encouraging feature of the market, however, is the fact that more manufacturers are buying wool and some of the largest operators are tak-ing fair weights of fine wool.

Recent sales of Texas 12 months have been at $1.10 for fairly choice wool, and $1.02 for ordinary 10-12 months.

Woolen wools are in moderate request, with wools of about three-eighths grade in most demand. Prices for these wools are hardly changed, good white eastern-scoured B lambs commanding about $1.

There has been some business in fine A at around $1.12 for really good wool and for fine territory at about Low wools of the India type have

Dealers find these two prices rather hard to reconcile; for in the days prior to the war it was the exceptional thing for noils to be more than two-thirds of the price of the wool from which they were combed; in fact, that was the west wool which they were combed; in fact, that was the west wool with for determining the the usual rule for determining the

This anamalous situation has arisen largely through the great popularity of women's broadcloth coats, which has required large quantities of short fine wools of the Texas and California type and also of fine white noils.

The sales in Sydney, Aust., are continued this week with offerings of $38,000 bales for the week. Monday, the selection was a poor one, although it did not appear that prices were materially changed from the last week-end.

Prices hardly could be quoted for this market. Yesterday, however, there was considerable improvement in the selection, and more or less wool suitable for this market was offered on label for th able for this market was offered. On the finer wools offered, prices were one to two cents lower on the clean basis than at the end of last week, although than at the end of last week, although on comeback wools the market was about two cents dearer. Thus, good combing 64-70s were costing 98C/$1. Equivalent clean in bond at Boston while good combing 64s were costing about 94@95c. Good spinners 64-70s were bringing 96@98c, clean in bond, while 60-64s were bringing 93@95c compared with 91@93c, clean in bond last week-end and 60-58s were fetching $8@89c, clean in bond compared with 86@87c last week-end.

Fine wools, it will be observed, are comparatively cheap as compared with the price of the lower qualities.

European markets still are rather dull, although the Continental markets are more active than is the Bradford market, where the top-makers are still trying to bring about lower prices for merino tops.

It is figured that warp tops out of Sydney are costing close to 53d in oil, which has been the spot price of late. Eradford combers, however, are willing to sell tops short to some extent for December delivery at about 51d, in the hope that the market for wool in Australia will recede sufficiently to allow them a profit. It does not appear, however, that very large sales have been made on this basis.

London Wool Auctlons

An interesting feature of the coming London Colonial wool auctions, which commence the fifth series on Sept. 18, will be the offering of English wools which have been classed this season by an association of English staplers for the purpose of offering these wools in London in quantity sufficient to comeback wools the market was out two cents dearer. Thus, good mbing 64-70s were costing 98cZ$1.

for the purpose of offering these wools in London in quantity sufficient to attract favorable competition. The next series of East India sales in Liverpool commences Sept. 11.

Interest is turning especially to the opening of fancy goods for the lightweight season by most of the leading mills on Sept. 4, 5 and 6.

This simultaneous opening of light eight fancies by practically all of the leading mills is believed to be a very good strategic move on the part of the mills, since it will attract buy-ers more generally to New York and tend to overcome the disposition to delay commitments, previously experienced when the mills strung out their opening over several weeks.

Mohair is in moderate inquiry with prices very firm. A little business is reported now and again in Turkey, fair average at about 53 cents in bond. Cape summer firsts are held at about 65 cents. Domestic hair is in light supply and prices are firmly main-

PITTSBURGH-KROGER PURCHASE Pittsburgh-Kroger Grocery & Bal and Company has acquired the Eagle grocery stores of Pittsburgh, consisting of 115 stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity. Sales of the Eagle Grocery Company in the first six months of the year were $1, 573,750, and for the full year 1927, 53,194,604.

The report states that capital expenditure for the year was lower than that of the preceding year by £102,-987; the sum set aside for depreciation was increased by £112.613, and the amount borrowed on temporary loan was less by £133.000.

It will be remembered that in August of last year the corporation agreed to the appointment of a special sub-committee of inquiry into the administration and working of the administration and working of the electricity department.

This sub-committee reported to the corporation that it had been the custom of the department to take matters into its own hands, and to incur large expenditure without the cognizance and appropriate of the electricity. nd approval of the electricity com-They stated also that the capital outlay for the nine-years ended May, 1927, was no less than £5,918,848, and that capital expenditure was being piled up more rapidly than was war-ranted by the business done, necessitating higher charges for current to meet the increasing debt charges.

Following on this report the corporation decided to reorganize the department. The manager, R. B. Mitchell, subsequently resigned his position, and recently the corporation appointed Mr. Herbert Belf, city engineer and general manager of the department.

The British and the Dutch might be willing to have the price stabilized but they would want to do it of their own accord that they could insure the benefits to their individual plantations.

made to the prosperity of the nation. Replies indicated substantial agreement on five services and others had considerable support. The five included the work leading up to the passage of the Federal Food and Drugs Act; the development of ac-curate methods for analysis of agricultural products; accurate studies of the values of various foods for specific purposes in maintaining health and vigor which were made possible by use of the respiration calorimeter: studies of the chemical composition, properties and nutritive values of various crops as guides to proper feeding and diet; and the experimental use of lime to correct the sterility of acid soils.

Other developments are: Tests of fertilizers for farm crops; studies of vitamins: reclamation alkali soils: development of the cane and beet sugar industries; work on utilization of wastes and by-products of agriculture; investigation and develop-ment of insecticides, fungicides, serums, etc.; and the investigations of the chemistry of soils.

To these accomplishments Dr. Browne adds special mention of the service chemists render to the farmer in protecting him from "seductive schemes designed to cheat him. It may be a new rat poison, a new chicken feed, a new culture for soil inoculation. The farmer can protect himself by asking advice from chem-

One of the most important immediate problems of agricultural chemistry, in Dr. Browne's opinion, is the prevention of soil erosion, although this may seem primarily a task for the agricultural engineer. The chemist can aid in maintenance of a reserve of organic matter in the soil, which in turn holds water and checks erosion

Agricultural chemists are also assisting the farmer to prolong the use of many articles he buys and are teaching him to prevent the spoilage of goods he offers for sale.

very close to business itself. Practically all business not of a routine nature may be reduced to the making of decisions on specific sets of facts. Often these decisions must be made from insufficient premises and under pressure. An educational method which compels students to decide similar problems from day to day, in and out of the classroom, must certainly be better preparation for general executive work than any method based primarily on telling the student how to do business.

This happened on a warm morning. The curbing along the edge of the Frog Pond was lined with pigeons, sparrows, blackbirds and squirrels. Suddenly Florrie, the most prominent of the pigeons, hopped on one foot and then on the other. Next she rustled her tail feathers and her wings and jumped from the curbing to the edge of the water below. Slowly, she walked into the water until it touched her feathers. Quickly, she ran back to where it was just up to her knees, if knees they are.
For several minutes she stood in meditation, winking first the left and then the right eye. Then she let herself into it until it was up to her neck. She must have enjoyed it for she gurgled contentedly. She lifted herself out of the water, then let

Fascism Looks Abroad

S MUSSOLINI looking to a new order of world Fascism? Recently signs have not been wanting which point quite definitely to this end, such, for example, as the far-reaching orders which the Fascist Government has just issued in its effort to control Italians who have migrated to other countries. The extent to which the Italian Dictator plans to press this supervision over the Italian population of other nations is yet to be made clear, but the implications of such a program, even in its present state, make it legitimately a concern to every state in which Italian immigrants enjoy residence. The new rulings which have lately been sent to all parts of the world where Fascists are living, particularize upon the original bill of instructions which Il Duce himself wrote and promulgated earlier this year as an authorized constitution for a world-wide organization of Fascism.

Whether or not international Fascism, as thus undertaken, is to be construed as a concern to outside nations must depend upon the extent to which the operation of its constitution affects the national laws and domestic activities of those nations. The leading tenets of this constitution, as reported by the Associated Press, require that Italians resident in other countries shall swear allegiance to the Fascist régime, receive membership cards of the organization, and take directions from consuls abroad as direct representatives of the Fascisti.

Most nations, and certainly one as heterogeneous in population as the United States, consider it essential that their immigrants shall look forward to naturalization and shall become a part of the political and social fabric of their adopted country. Yet the new Fascist constitution stipulates that Italians resident abroad shall not take part in the internal political activities of the country in which they are located. Also, in its provisions that Fascists abroad shall swear allegiance to Fascismo and obedience to their Italian representatives, the constitution sets up practices which many nations are likely to find working against their efforts to assimilate their foreign-born.

Again, most nations pursue extensive projects of assimilation, and view the success of their efforts as a dominant factor in the enactment of immigration restrictions; yet the latest Fascist instructions issued from Rome note "with displeasure that many Italians residing abroad have the habit of sending their children to local foreign schools rather than to Italian schools," and point out that "it is the strict duty of Fascists abroad to have their children educated with Italian sentiment in Italian schools." And to the same end it is required that Fascists abroad, except where the local laws prohibit, must wear the Fascist badge, since this badge "is a symbol of Italianity for its wearer." Yet all of these activities tend to accentuate the immigrant nationality within a country rather than to aid in its assimilation.

World Fascism may offer to some a fascinating project, but if its attainment depends upon the encouraging of Fascist groups abroad to oppose naturalization in their adopted countries, it is more likely to hamper Italy's muchneeded emigration than to help it.

New York in Presidential Elections

TECAUSE of the number of votes which the State of New York casts in the electoral college, it is of more than passing interest to review the history of the Empire State in its relation to presidential elections. The general impression seems to be that, because of the political complexion of the City of New York, the State of necessity belongs in the Democratic column. Such is not the case, however.

It is historic fact that New York, in presidential elections, has commonly cast its vote for the Republican candidate. In the eighteen presidential elections since the nomination of Abraham Lincoln in 1860, New York has gone Republican in the great majority of elections. Lincoln carried the State both in 1860 and in 1864. It was also carried by Grant, Garfield, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Hughes, Harding and Coolidge. To only three Democratic candidates in fifty-six years, namely, Tilden, Cleveland and Wilson, has New York given its electoral vote. As the combined vote of Taft and Roosevelt exceeded that cast for Wilson in 1912, the State really went Republican, although because of Wilson's plurality the electoral vote was in the Democratic column.

The Democratic majorities by which that party has won the State have been small. In the famous Cleveland-Blaine contest, the former's plurality was a scanty 1149 votes. As compared with Cleveland's majority of nearly 200,000 as a gubernatorial candidate only two years before, the smallness of his victory over Blaine is excellent proof that the election of the State's Executive is not a criterion for the presidential preference of the yoters of the State. Manifestly, many voters who supported Cleveland for Governor did not give him their support as a candidate for the Presidency.

It is now thirty-six years since New York has really gone Democratic in a presidential election, although it has often elected a Governor from that party. If one were to judge the present situation by the huge majorities of the presidential candidates in 1920 and 1924-1,139,929 in the former year and 869,262 in the latterthere would be little room for doubt as to the result in the Empire State on November 6 of this year.

Russia and the Peace Edifice

TNTIL Frank B. Kellogg, United States Secretary of State, announced that opportunity would be furnished all countries to adhere to the pact to renounce war as an instrument of national policy, the question literally on everybody's lips was: What of Russia? It was a logical inference that some move toward disarmament should follow the signature to the anti-war treaty, yet it was regarded as out of the question to expect nations to make any considerable reduction in their forces, while a neighbor remained armed to the hilt and prepared to advance the cause of Bolshevism by fire and sword. What assurance was there that Russia would not employ its army, recently estimated by the British Minister of War at more than 1,000,000 men, to further its own ends when the rest of Europe had submitted to a voluntary impairment of forces?

The problem facing Mr. Kellogg was how to obtain the support of Russia in the peace edifice which he had done so much to erect. Diplomatically the United States was not on good terms with Russia. In France, there lay a solution, for the invitation to adhere to the treaty could go through Paris, and thus the difficulty would be surmounted. This was the procedure finally decided upon.

It is confidently expected that Georgi Tchitcherin, the Soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs, will join the representatives of other nations in their desire to make peace secure. Geneva is no longer a barrier to him. The charges of intrigue he made against the League of Nations, have long since lost their force, and, though the honesty of its intent has been questioned. his own proposal for complete disarmament, made at a recent conference of the powers, is still fresh in memory. The all-important question will come when the sincerity of Russia, and for that matter of other nations also, is put to the test.

A Forward Step in Forestry

NE of the most encouraging signs of recent times in respect to timber conservation and reforestation in the United States has been the activity of big lumber-producing companies in the study of forest problems and the adoption of measures of conservation in connection with their own business. Conspicuous in this movement have been the American Paper & Pulp Association and the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. The latter organization has just begun a new work which will surely be of great value. It is sending its industrial forester, Franklin W. Reed, on a tour of the pine regions of the South, where he will make an extensive industrial forestry survey.

Starting with the territory of the Southern Pine Association, the North Carolina Pine Association and the Hardwood Manufacturers' Institute, Mr. Reed will visit in turn the forest areas in which the different associations operate. He will pay but little attention to the northeastern states, because information about the woods of their territories has been gathered and will be furnished by the American Paper & Pulp Asso-

It is highly significant that the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association should make the proposed investigation, for it comes as a supplement to an extensive trade expansion campaign of the association designed to promote the consumption of forest products. It shows that the association plans definitely to promote efficiently and on a large scale the encouragement of the reproduction and perpetuation of the sources of forest materials. Mr. Reed's survey will enable the Manufacturers' Association to make specific statements rather than theoretical generalizations regarding industrial reforestation. He will particularly compile information about large forest properties whose owners are trying to grow and conserve timber, and will combine this with an account of how each of them is achieving his purpose. With the aid of this survey, it is expected that definite and trustworthy conclusions may be drawn as to how far industrial forestry can be relied on to keep privately owned forest areas productive and to assure to lumber industries a dependable supply of raw material. It is hoped also to show the extent to which public forest ownership, federal, state and municipal, must be expanded in order to insure continued productivity of such forest lands as private capital cannot afford to handle.

A Successful Institute

As The Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., draws to a close, those who have heard the discussions and the thousands who have read accounts of them must recognize the service rendered there this year. The program related to current questions of national and international interest. The lecturers and conference leaders were authorities whose personal experiences had given them an intimate understanding of the topics considered.

While partisan politicians have busied themselves with plans for a presidential campaign, these students of social, economic and political sciences have analyzed critically many important problems of public affairs. Some of the discussions related to the forthcoming national election: others seemed equally as important. although somewhat more remote.

The thoroughness of the institute's program was illustrated in its debate on the Manchurian question. Not only were the Japanese and Chinese viewpoints presented by men close to their respective governments, but a Russian formerly in the Kerensky Cabinet stated his country's side of the issue, and an American publisher with long experience in the Far East also was heard. With utmost frankness the United States' policies in Latin America were attacked and defended by speakers at Williamstown. Probably the first extended outline of points on which the Kellogg treaty might be opposed in the United States Senate was presented to the institute, along with an able defense of the pact. Lecturers on problems in Europe and the Near East also attracted wide attention.

This beneficial program calls attention to the several similar but less extended sessions held elsewhere this summer that likewise have proved helpful. Everyone who has followed the discussions in these institutes must recognize that they provide an annual opportunity "to see oursels as ithers see us"-politically. They tend to develop a more enlightened citizenship.

Popular Interest in Politics

ELEGATES to the twenty-fifth meeting of the International Parliamentary Union, now convening in Berlin, will doubtless find encouragement in the results of the recent elections in Greece. There the forces of parliamentarism and political liberalism, under the leadership of Eleutherios Venizelos, have won over the royalists and supporters of the former dictator, Gen. Theodoros Pangalos, a victory so overwhelming, so decisive and so significant as thoroughly to gratify all believers in representative government.

Encouragement was needed. Dictatorships have sprung up in many parts of Europe since the Great War. Italy, Poland, Spain and Hungary in a marked degree, and other countries less forcibly, have felt the strong grip of absolutism upon them. Egypt has quite recently joined the ranks of the dictatorships. Political theorists have observed these phenomena with the greatest interest, described them as manifestations of "pragmatism in politics," and speculated as to whether representative institutions are doomed to destruction.

It may be that the Greek elections mark the turning of the tide. They certainly remove any lingering doubt as to the republican sympathies of the Greek people, which the monarchists have questioned and sought to thwart ever since the establishment, by plebiscite, of the Republic in 1924. A verdict so decisive as that which deprived the Royalists of 100 seats in Parliament and left them with only fifteen is incapable of more than one interpretation.

The German Chancellor, Dr. Wirth, has remarked that in nearly every country parliamentarism is in a critical state, due in part to a waning of popular interest in politics. The people of the United States have an opportunity to prove this year that their interest in politics is not on the wane, and that they appreciate the political privileges which their system of government confers upon them. A vote cast in the presidential election is not only an employment of an inalienable right in expressing a political preference; it is also a protest against indifferentism in government, from which springs

Billboard Advertising in Its Place

THEN realtors join with advertisers to protect nature from the encroaching billboard it is reasonably evident that this matter is being regarded with great seriousness by practical men. Until recently realtors and advertisers have not been in obvious sympathy with those of the general public who avowedly take more pleasure in looking at a stream, mountain, lake, woodland, or wayside pasture than in being reminded of some purchasable commodity that might, or might not, seem desirable to purchase at some other time. But now one reads in the newspaper that advertisers-200 or 300 of them-have agreed to withdraw such advertising from snots of beauty. One reads also that the National Association of Real Estate Boards is working with the Outdoor Advertising Association of America to draft a model state license law that will "protect residence sections in cities and scenic spots in country regions against poster and billboard defacement." Thus the conviction gains wider and wider acceptation that natural beauty is something of genuine importance, held in trust by humanity from generation to generation, and not to be injured by individuals for their own real or expected benefit.

An ancient proverb has it that "All things have their place, knew we but how to place them." It is often the case that a billboard which defaces landscape in one location would detract from nobody's enjoyment and lose no advertising value if placed in another. There is actually a good deal of pictorial beauty displayed in the outdoor picture gallery, were it not displayed where (if one may paraphrase Emerson) nature paints the best part of the picture. It is more and more being discovered by advertisers that good art is the better advertising; and by realtors that a too insistent effort to sell property måkes possible buyers suspicious.

How a President Is Elected

III

NE of the most cherished of political fictions in the United States is the widespread supposition that the man receiving the votes of the largest number of people is necessarily elected President. It is true that it most frequently turns out that way, but this is not because —and here other favorite suppositions go by the board it is the law nor because the framers of the Constitution intended it should be.

There have been three cases in the history of the Nation in which the man who received the largest popular votethat is, the largest number of the votes which individual citizens place in the ballot boxes-was not elected. The votes which elect Presidents are the electoral votes, the ballots of electors chosen by states according to their numbers of Senators and Representatives in Congress. When an individual votes, he votes for one or the other ticket of these electors, who for all practical purposes could as well be so many automatons to deposit ballots for the nominee of the winning party in each state.

The popular preference first was frustrated in 1824 Andrew Jackson then received more than 155,000 popular votes against approximately 105,000 for John Quincy Adams and 45,000 each for Clay and Crawford. The electeral vote being divided so that there was no majority, the election went into the House of Representatives. There, gaining support of the Clay forces, Adams was elected by the vote of thirteen states of the then twenty-four.

1 1 1 Probably the greatest confusion that has attended national election in the United States centered around that of 1876 between Rutherford B. Hayes and Samuel J. Tilden. Counts in Florida and Louisiana were contested and the regularity of certification of electors in South Carolina and Oregon. An Electoral Commission established by Congress to determine the contests, consisting of five members each from the House of Representatives, Senate and Supreme Court, came finally to be constituted of eight Republicans and seven Democrats. It decided every case by a strict party vote refusing "to go behind the This made Hayes President by 185 electoral returns." votes to 184 for the Democratic nominee. Yet Tilden, even by his opponents' count in the two disputed states, had a plurality of more than 250,000 popular votes.

Again in 1888, Benjamin Harrison obtained a majority of electoral votes over Grover Cleveland without a plurality of popular votes. While Cleveland rolled up a lead of more than 100,000 in the other states, the result virtually was decided in his home state, New York, which, with thirty-six electoral votes, went against him by 13,000 out of more than 1,250,000 votes cast.

It is this way the upsets occur. Small majorities in a few large or thickly populated states swing more electoral votes than large majorities in a number of medium-sized or thinly settled states. One reason the Constitutional Convention was loath to go the whole distance for election by direct vote of the people was the belief that such a method would give undue advantage to candidates from large states. It was intended in part to be an election by states, as is shown in the provision that in the House of Representatives in case of no electoral majority the ballot is to be by states. Yet the electoral college plan has hardly diminished the predominance of the large states. Only once since Jackson's time has a President been elected with both New York and Pennsylvania against him. Nominating conventions generally give preference to a candidate from one of the

When states chose their electors by districts, as some of them did for 30 or 40 years, there was possibility of some representation of the minority party in a state's electoral vote, but as the large states found their influence increased by casting the electoral vote in block, all had to come to it, so that now it might be said they vote under

Whether a return to election by congressional districts would improve the system may be questioned. It would be subject to gerrymandering, and for other reasons also might not always reflect accurately the popular vote. Another proposal, supported by the Proportional Representation League, is that the electoral vote of each state be allotted in the mathematical proportion of the popular vote.

ome may ask; why not go over to direct popular election? The practical reason is that such a move could only be made by an amendment to the Constitution, which | the best judgment and political wisdom of their times into requires the assent of three-fourths of the states. Seven- the United States Constitution. It is a privilege well worth teen states have six electors or less and would lose a using.

weight they now hold through the two electors for their senatorial seats; therefore they probably would not assent. The argument also is made that the electoral system discourages sectional candidacies.

Another objection might be raised against direct election on the assertion that it would make more frequent the election of candidates who, though receiving a plurality over any other candidate, received only a minority of the votes cast. Even with the two-party system in vogue, surprisingly few Presidents have had a clear majority of all popular votes when the ballots of the Prohibition Party and other so-called minor parties are counted in the total. The electoral college system has discouraged third parties. because under it a party must carry states if it is to get

Whether one of the proposed methods of conforming presidential elections to the popular impression of them will gain support remains to be seen, but there is manifest inequality in a system under which a majority of 100 votes, or even of one vote, in Ohio-not to take extreme examples-is recorded in twenty-four electoral votes, while a majority of 100,000 in Minnesota or North Carolina earries only half that many. It is an evidence, however, of the comparative uniformity of political sentiment throughout the most of the states that only three times in thirtyfive has the system resulted in the election of other than the recipient of the popular plurality.

There is one thing that never has happened and, it is safe to say, never will happen, in a presidential election. No President ever has been elected by the votes of people who were for him but who neglected to go to the polls. The one way in which people can elect the man of their choice is by cherishing and exercising the privilege of voting for him. Perhaps this privilege would be more highly valued if more knew how much freer and more safeguarded it is now than it was in colonial times or the early days of the Republic.

At the time of the writing of the Constitution most officials, at least local ones, were voted for by the oral method. When a citizen walked into the polling place the election judge asked in a loud voice, "Sam Brown, for whom do you vote?" The voter replied with the name of his choice, and partisans of that candidate applauded. The right of secrecy of the ballot had only begun to gain recognition.

For decades afterward, when the written ballot had been adopted, the voting still was far from secret. The ballots were printed not by the state but by the candidates. or parties, and contained only the names of the ticket they wished voted. These were hawked about on the streets by party workers. The ballots moreover were printed on listinctive colors of paper so that watchers could tell from distance what ticket a man placed in the box. This virtually abetted bribery and intimidation by enabling the bribers or intimidators to make sure they got the votes for which they bargained or browbeat.

Consequently the Australian ballot system, embodying ballot printed at public expense, containing the names of all parties' candidates, obtainable only at the polling place. and marked and cast in secret, made a strong appeal when introduced in 1888 through state-wide adoption in Massachusetts. Practically all the states now have some form of printed general ballot and secret polling place, though details vary widely, and all have enacted laws to prevent repeating," "stufling the box," and frauds in counting.

At first hedged about by property qualifications limiting it to "freeholders" of so much land or taxable property, the privilege of suffrage for President has gradually been extended by state laws to more and more of the people. It was also extended by the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which provided that suffrage should not be denied on account of race or color.

It was extended even more notably in the Nineteenth Amendment, which gave to women the right to vote. Women had voted for presidential electors under state laws in more than half the states before the ratification of the amendment, and they have participated nationally in two presidential elections since.

Everything considered, the citizen has before him, in the casting of his vote for presidential electors this year, a privilege which has been made much more easy of access, more free from annoyance or duress, more widely enjoyed, ultimate choice than it was when the forefathers wrote

I was very much surprised recently to learn that my daughter of twenty-one years can remember nothing of the "saloon." So completely has the little she did see been eradicated from her memory! Then I realized the great contrast between her girlhood and mine regarding the saloon.

When a small girl my father moved into a place which was well suited for him to reach his business and a very good neighborhood. We lived there more than fifteen years and I have very vivid recollections of the changes for the worse which took place around us until we were forced to move because of them. The changes were the direct effects of the saloon. Many were the cases of cruelty and starvation caused by the man who frequented the saloon too long or too often. Many were the streets we could not travel because they were noted for their drunkenness, disorderliness and

Presenting the Truth About Japan

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

For some months past I have had the desire to express to you my great admiration, indeed, my personal grat-itude, for the keen discernment and the sense of justice that has characterized your various references to Japan. No other nation has been so unjustly presented to the people of the United States by the press at large as has the Japanese nation. Much has been written to "injure," and far too little to "bless."

I have lived for years in Japan. My husband, Ernest Fenollosa, went directly from a postgraduate course at Harvard to become one of the earliest teachers in English in the then recently established Imperial University. Many of his first pupils became dominant figures of statesmanship in the New Japan. Ernest Fenollosa is still lovingly spoken of in Japan as "Dai Jin Sensei," or "Teacher of Great Men."

The noble and splendid qualities of the Japanese people have been hidden, so far as the United States was concerned, behind a barrage of petty commercial wrangles, unimportant racial differences, and similar products of limitation and ignorance.

My permanent home was in Tokyo, but I have traveled, even lived for months at a time, in other parts of Japan. It is the most homogeneous race in the world—indeed, the only truly homogeneous race-but it has, of course. its various social classes. I have met and talked with individuals belonging to most of these, from the lowly street scavenger to court nobles and their families. Among them all alike I have found, not only the superficial charm and politeness conceded by even their detractors, but a deep-seated kindness, a capacity for enduring friendship, and a loyalty to those who have loved or served them, unequaled, I am sure, by any MARY MCNEIL FENOLLOSA. other race on earth. #### The Monitor in New Zealand

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

I thought you might like to know how full of interest and how teeming with up-to-date news we find The Christian Science Monitor in this far-away corner of For instance, when the last mail came in the first Monitor I opened was May 31 and the first article that met my eye was entitled, "Wireless Listener in New Zealand Hears Nightingale Singing in England." It was only a few days before that our local paper published a similar piece of news.

This present session of Parliament is to deal with the question of women police and on June 6 I found in the news from Berlin, in the Monitor, a paragraph about the women police in that city. I could mention many other examples of the up-to-dateness of Monitor news even in out-of-the-way corners of the globe.

When the Law Is Fully Enforced

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

For some time past there has been published in the Monitor an article each day on "Prohibition Fruitage," and in every case the report has been good and only good. If the efforts of prohibition are so great for good at the present, what will they be when the law is fully enforced?

Some of us who lived in cities in the days of the open saloon, and saw its effects on the morals, business, health, home life and work of thousands, find ourselves asking the question. What will the fruitage be when the law is generally enforced, and when bootlegging shall entirely cease?

Then comes another question: Can it be done? To this question there is but one answer, yes, for if not, then the liquor traffic has more power than the Federal Government, and evil has more power than good. This no one is ready to admit who believes in the power of the right to overcome and destroy what is wrong.

Then the question is, "How?" In answering this question, it is safe to say, the battle must largely be fought at the ballot box, through requiring those elected to do what they take oath to do. The laws of the land—including the prohibition law—must be enforced with the same steadfastness as are the laws which say, "Thou shalt not steal" and "Thou shalt not kill."
